Ghosts In The Photographs

Epic, glorious, wide-screen post-rock instrumental trio with a knack at nurturing turn of the millennium sonic blossoms that reach towards the heavens. "Ghosts In The Photographs open the dam to wave upon wave of Explosions In The Sky styled guitar noise [...] Imposing, impressive stuff" Nightshift review of their set at Punt 2015
<http://www.ghostsinthephotographs.bandcamp.com>

NeuroHarp

Another trio, of a very different kind, from Brighton. NeuroHarp trade in abstract, heavy stoner jams, as one would expect of a band featuring the ex-drummer of much-missed sludge titans Caravan of Whores. What makes them truly special, however, is the fact that they are named after the home-made brain-controlled instrument they use onstage. Cerebro-doom!

Foci's Left

Rare live showing for local ambient electronic auteur. "The most satisfying element of this record is its density - where many ambient composers are happy to let things run, Buckingham has created a CD of real sonic depth, with a lush textural variety" Nightshift review of Life In A Less Southern Town.
