

Friday 28th Nov '25

Common Ground, Little Clarendon Street, Oxford

Barton Hartshorn

Alan Caruso

The Scott Gordon
Band

Entry £6.00 (cash only) Door 8.00pm

£5.00 in advance from <https://www.wegotickets.com/gappytooth>

www.gappytooth.com

Friday 28th Nov '25

Common Ground, Little Clarendon Street, Oxford

Barton Hartshorn

Alan Caruso

The Scott Gordon
Band

Entry £6.00 (cash only) Door 8.00pm

£5.00 in advance from <https://www.wegotickets.com/gappytooth>

www.gappytooth.com

Friday 28th Nov '25

Common Ground, Little Clarendon Street, Oxford

Barton Hartshorn

Alan Caruso

The Scott Gordon
Band

Entry £6.00 (cash only) Door 8.00pm

£5.00 in advance from <https://www.wegotickets.com/gappytooth>

www.gappytooth.com

Friday 28th Nov '25

Common Ground, Little Clarendon Street, Oxford

Barton Hartshorn

Alan Caruso

The Scott Gordon
Band

Entry £6.00 (cash only) Door 8.00pm

£5.00 in advance from <https://www.wegotickets.com/gappytooth>

www.gappytooth.com

Barton Hartshorn

Songwriter Barton has just relocated to Oxford from Paris, and this new trio are exploring a new sound which has moved on from his previous Americana sound to something like a cross between Supergrass and Elvis Costello. "You can't deny the songwriting talent of Barton Hartshorn...finesse, elegance and a bewitching voice. An indie pearl." Rolling Stone. "A superb voice and heartfelt storytelling. Barton has the imagination of a novelist...a truly singular work." Benzinemag (France). "Finely tuned, memorable melodies and a voice with elegance and punch" Rock-Folk.
<https://bartonhartshorn.com/>

Alan Caruso

Originally from Northern Ireland, and now resident in London, Alan makes a sort of rootsy indie music which is half Postcard Records and half Folkways, with a winning sprechgesang delivery. Illustrate Magazine called his debut EP "one of solace and companionship through music. designed to be worn on headphones late at night, acting as a melancholy but amusing and welcome friend.", whereas Plastic Mag spotted influences from "David Berman, Leonard Cohen, Daniel Johnston, Bruce Springsteen, Judee Sill, Carole King, Josephine Foster, Faye Webster and Ted Hawkins"
<https://www.instagram.com/alancaruso33/>

The Scott Gordon Band

Scott Gordon describes himself as "just yer friendly neighbourhood hunka slidin', stompin', pickin' blues and country roots goodness with a Norn Iron accent", and whilst the NI connection with Alan is purely coincidental, the eloquent rootsiness of his lap-slide speckled songs is a deliberately selected complement to the other acts. "The music is refreshingly gimmick-free, these aren't songs about hoe-downs in the barn or living your life on a tractor while little Missy stays at home raising the kids, these are songs about long commutes, social commentary and love songs that punch well above their weight (if 'Let Me Share In Yours' was sung by Van Morrison, it would be a wedding first dance staple!)" Dancing About Architecture
<https://scottgordonband.bandcamp.com/>

Barton Hartshorn

Songwriter Barton has just relocated to Oxford from Paris, and this new trio are exploring a new sound which has moved on from his previous Americana sound to something like a cross between Supergrass and Elvis Costello. "You can't deny the songwriting talent of Barton Hartshorn...finesse, elegance and a bewitching voice. An indie pearl." Rolling Stone. "A superb voice and heartfelt storytelling. Barton has the imagination of a novelist...a truly singular work." Benzinemag (France). "Finely tuned, memorable melodies and a voice with elegance and punch" Rock-Folk.
<https://bartonhartshorn.com/>

Alan Caruso

Originally from Northern Ireland, and now resident in London, Alan makes a sort of rootsy indie music which is half Postcard Records and half Folkways, with a winning sprechgesang delivery. Illustrate Magazine called his debut EP "one of solace and companionship through music. designed to be worn on headphones late at night, acting as a melancholy but amusing and welcome friend.", whereas Plastic Mag spotted influences from "David Berman, Leonard Cohen, Daniel Johnston, Bruce Springsteen, Judee Sill, Carole King, Josephine Foster, Faye Webster and Ted Hawkins"
<https://www.instagram.com/alancaruso33/>

The Scott Gordon Band

Scott Gordon describes himself as "just yer friendly neighbourhood hunka slidin', stompin', pickin' blues and country roots goodness with a Norn Iron accent", and whilst the NI connection with Alan is purely coincidental, the eloquent rootsiness of his lap-slide speckled songs is a deliberately selected complement to the other acts. "The music is refreshingly gimmick-free, these aren't songs about hoe-downs in the barn or living your life on a tractor while little Missy stays at home raising the kids, these are songs about long commutes, social commentary and love songs that punch well above their weight (if 'Let Me Share In Yours' was sung by Van Morrison, it would be a wedding first dance staple!)" Dancing About Architecture
<https://scottgordonband.bandcamp.com/>

Barton Hartshorn

Songwriter Barton has just relocated to Oxford from Paris, and this new trio are exploring a new sound which has moved on from his previous Americana sound to something like a cross between Supergrass and Elvis Costello. "You can't deny the songwriting talent of Barton Hartshorn...finesse, elegance and a bewitching voice. An indie pearl." Rolling Stone. "A superb voice and heartfelt storytelling. Barton has the imagination of a novelist...a truly singular work." Benzinemag (France). "Finely tuned, memorable melodies and a voice with elegance and punch" Rock-Folk.
<https://bartonhartshorn.com/>

Alan Caruso

Originally from Northern Ireland, and now resident in London, Alan makes a sort of rootsy indie music which is half Postcard Records and half Folkways, with a winning sprechgesang delivery. Illustrate Magazine called his debut EP "one of solace and companionship through music. designed to be worn on headphones late at night, acting as a melancholy but amusing and welcome friend.", whereas Plastic Mag spotted influences from "David Berman, Leonard Cohen, Daniel Johnston, Bruce Springsteen, Judee Sill, Carole King, Josephine Foster, Faye Webster and Ted Hawkins"
<https://www.instagram.com/alancaruso33/>

The Scott Gordon Band

Scott Gordon describes himself as "just yer friendly neighbourhood hunka slidin', stompin', pickin' blues and country roots goodness with a Norn Iron accent", and whilst the NI connection with Alan is purely coincidental, the eloquent rootsiness of his lap-slide speckled songs is a deliberately selected complement to the other acts. "The music is refreshingly gimmick-free, these aren't songs about hoe-downs in the barn or living your life on a tractor while little Missy stays at home raising the kids, these are songs about long commutes, social commentary and love songs that punch well above their weight (if 'Let Me Share In Yours' was sung by Van Morrison, it would be a wedding first dance staple!)" Dancing About Architecture
<https://scottgordonband.bandcamp.com/>

Barton Hartshorn

Songwriter Barton has just relocated to Oxford from Paris, and this new trio are exploring a new sound which has moved on from his previous Americana sound to something like a cross between Supergrass and Elvis Costello. "You can't deny the songwriting talent of Barton Hartshorn...finesse, elegance and a bewitching voice. An indie pearl." Rolling Stone. "A superb voice and heartfelt storytelling. Barton has the imagination of a novelist...a truly singular work." Benzinemag (France). "Finely tuned, memorable melodies and a voice with elegance and punch" Rock-Folk.
<https://bartonhartshorn.com/>

Alan Caruso

Originally from Northern Ireland, and now resident in London, Alan makes a sort of rootsy indie music which is half Postcard Records and half Folkways, with a winning sprechgesang delivery. Illustrate Magazine called his debut EP "one of solace and companionship through music. designed to be worn on headphones late at night, acting as a melancholy but amusing and welcome friend.", whereas Plastic Mag spotted influences from "David Berman, Leonard Cohen, Daniel Johnston, Bruce Springsteen, Judee Sill, Carole King, Josephine Foster, Faye Webster and Ted Hawkins"
<https://www.instagram.com/alancaruso33/>

The Scott Gordon Band

Scott Gordon describes himself as "just yer friendly neighbourhood hunka slidin', stompin', pickin' blues and country roots goodness with a Norn Iron accent", and whilst the NI connection with Alan is purely coincidental, the eloquent rootsiness of his lap-slide speckled songs is a deliberately selected complement to the other acts. "The music is refreshingly gimmick-free, these aren't songs about hoe-downs in the barn or living your life on a tractor while little Missy stays at home raising the kids, these are songs about long commutes, social commentary and love songs that punch well above their weight (if 'Let Me Share In Yours' was sung by Van Morrison, it would be a wedding first dance staple!)" Dancing About Architecture
<https://scottgordonband.bandcamp.com/>